

Figure 1: Single hierarchical clustering. Both tumor and gene clusters exhibit typical “chaining” behavior. The more data points in a cluster, the more likely that that cluster is closest to another cluster and will continue to grow. The smaller clusters do a good job of grouping Normal, Luminal A, and Luminal B, respectively. The heatmap has only one clear grouping of lower protein abundant genes in Luminal A tumors.

